System Analysis

Unemployment and Underemployment The generally high rate of unemployment and lack of jobs, especially for the youths, keeps many from making a decent income.

with possible IT-enabled interventions that could be undertaken to mitigate such problems to some extent:

1. Online Job Platforms and Skills Development: Develop online job-matching platforms that cater to the specific requirements of the African job market. This can be at the local levels, where the companies post the jobs and get skilled workers, especially the freelancers.
2. E-Learning for Digital Skills: Develop platforms for training in IT skills, such as coding, digital marketing, and graphic design. The platform will provide for certification and link the graduates with the local and global job markets, thereby encouraging entrepreneurship and growth of tech startups.

Through these IT solutions, each one of these challenges would be more positively addressed for quality lives in all fields of life within the communities.
